

FACTS & FIGURES – Women’s Super G in Kvitfjell

- There have been six women’s World Cup Super G races in Kvitfjell so far and current Super G season standings leader Lara Gut-Behrami (SUI/Head) has finished on the podium in half of them.
- She has a win (first race in a 2024 double-header) a 2nd place (second race of that 2024 double-header) and a 3rd place (first race of a 2023 double-header) in her four races in the resort in the past two years.
- Victory in the most recent World Cup Super G in Garmisch, means that Gut-Behrami has four wins, four 2nds, a 3rd and a 5th, 6th and 7th in her past 12 races in the discipline.
- Currently 75 points clear of Federica Brignone in the race for the Super G Crystal Globe, Gut-Behrami is aiming for a third successive season crown - that would be the first time she has achieved such a feat in any discipline.
- If Gut-Behrami doesn’t win either of the two Kvitfjell Downhill races, she will have the opportunity to take 5th place on her own in the list of all-time women’s World Cup winners, over-taking Austria’s Renate Götschl (46 wins).
- The Swiss star is already in second place on the all-time women’s Super G winner’s list, with 23 victories. Behind only Lindsey Vonn (USA) who has 28 wins.
- Federica Brignone (ITA/Rossignol) can win her 12th World Cup Super G race to equal Carole Merle (FRA) in 5th place on the all-time women's list.
- She was victorious in the most recent World Cup Super G in Kvitfjell (the second of last season’s double-header) and has a chance to become the first back-to-back champion.
- Currently 2nd in the season standings, Brignone has ended runner-up in the Super G Crystal Globe race four times already, winning the title just once (2021/22).
- Brignone has been on the podium in her past three World Cup Super G races (winner in Cortina and 3rd in Garmisch and St. Anton) - a record streak for her.
- She also took silver in the Super G at the 2025 World Championships in Saalbach.
- The 34-year-old Brignone has seven World Cup wins this season already, the most she has achieved in any season in her career.
- Brignone arrived in Kvitfjell with 34 World Cup wins in total, so depending on what she does in the two Downhill races, she may have the opportunity to equal or over-take Katja Seizinger (GER) in the all-time women’s list (36 wins).
- Sofia Goggia (ITA/Atomic) has won seven World Cup Super G races and can equal Hilde Gerg (GER) in equal 8th place on the all-time women's list with her eighth victory.
- She is currently sitting 3rd in the season standings - her best finish to date is 5th (2017/18 and 2021/22).
- Winner of the Super G in Beaver Creek this season, Goggia has a best Super G finish in Kvitfjell of 4th, in 2023.

- Kajsa Vickhoff Lie (NOR/Head) would appear to offer the best chance of home success. She finished 2nd in the most recent World Cup Super G in Garmisch, has three other top-seven finishes this season and won bronze at the recent World Championships.
 - Her record in Kvitfjell is good too, with a win (Downhill in 2023) and a 4th place (Super G in 2024) in her past four races in the resort.
 - Ingeborg Helen Marken (NOR) is the only Norwegian women's Super G winner in Kvitfjell, having won the debut race in 1996.
- Five different women have won the five Super G races so far this season, with Conny Hütter (AUT/Head) victorious in St. Moritz.
 - Hütter knows what it takes to win in Kvitfjell, having triumphed in the opening Super G race in 2023.
 - Aside from her win this season, she has just one other top-five, a 4th place in the opener in Beaver Creek.
- Fresh from winning World Championship Super G gold on home snow, Stephanie Venier (AUT/Head) will arrive in Kvitfjell with plenty of confidence.
 - She has course form too, having finished 2nd in the Super G in 2023 - part of an Austrian 1-2-3.
 - So far this season, her best World Cup Super G finish is 2nd in St. Anton - her only podium place.
- Lauren Macuga (USA/Rossignol) has enjoyed a breakout season, and much of her success has come in the Super G.
 - Her first World Cup podium and first win came in the St. Anton Super G in January and she followed it up with bronze in the Super G at the 2025 World Championships.
 - Since coming 5th in the second Super G in Kvitfjell 12 months ago - at the time her best ever World Cup result and only third top-10 - the 22-year-old has recorded a further five top-10 results (three in Downhill and two in Super G).
- Fresh from winning Downhill bronze at the 2025 World Championships Ester Ledecka (CZE/Kaestle) returns to Kvitfjell, where she finished 3rd in the Super G 12 months ago.
 - Ledecka has just one top-10 Super G finish this season, 7th in St. Moritz.
- Lindsey Vonn (USA/Head) has never raced a World Cup in Kvitfjell.
 - She does have a record 28 World Cup Super G victories elsewhere.
 - So far the 40-year-old's best result in the Super G in her four World Cup races since her return, is 4th - recorded in St. Anton.
