

PREVIEW MEN'S TEAM LARGE HILL ZAKOPANE – Saturday 20 Jan 2024

- Since the start of last season, the six men's team events were won by four different countries: Austria (3), Poland, Germany and Slovenia (one apiece). The Slovenians won the Super Team event in this inaugural PolSki Tour, in Wisla on 13 January (they were represented by Anže Lanišek and Lovro Kos).
- Slovenia can win back-to-back men's team events in the World Cup for the third time, after a streak of three in March 2013 - January 2014 (including a win in Zakopane) and two successive wins in January-February 2013 (first places in Zakopane and Willingen).
- Austria won five of the last six men's large hill team events in the World Cup, including each of the last three. Their winning streak was interrupted by Slovenia in Zakopane in January 2022.
- The most recent men's large hill team event in the World Cup took place in Lahti on 25 March 2023. The winning quartet of Stefan Kraft, Jan Hörl, Michael Hayböck and Daniel Tschofenig held off Slovenia and Poland.
- Austria (five out of 17) have claimed the most wins in men's World Cup team events in Poland. Germany and Slovenia follow on four victories each.
- There have been 11 men's team events in Zakopane in World Cup history. Five different nations celebrated at least one win: Germany (4), Slovenia (3), Austria (2), Poland (1) and Norway (1).
- Austria won the last men's World Cup team event in Zakopane (14 January 2023). They beat runners-up Poland by only one point (1151.5 to 1150.5 points). Austria's gap to Germany in third place was 7.1 points.
- Germany recorded the most wins (4) and podiums (8) in men's World Cup team events in Zakopane. The Germans came third at this venue last year.
- Poland won only two of the 17 men's World Cup team events in their home country (11 in Zakopane, six in Wisla): victories in Zakopane (27 January 2018) and Wisla (17 November 2018).
- Japan is the only country to have claimed a podium result in a men's World Cup team event in Poland without taking a win here: third place in Zakopane on 15 January 2022.
