

PREVIEW WOMEN'S TEAM NORMAL HILL OBERSTDORF – Friday 26 Feb 2021

Germany

- Germany won the only previous world title in the women's team normal hill event. In 2019, Germany finished ahead of Austria (silver) and Norway (bronze).
- Katharina Althaus and Carina Vogt (both 3) are the women to have won the most gold medals in team events (women's/mixed) at the world championships. Vogt (G3-S0-B1) is the only woman to have claimed more than three world championship medals in team events.
- Germany (2) is one of three countries to have claimed multiple World Cup victories in this event, alongside Austria (2) and Japan (2).

Slovenia

- Slovenia won the only women's team normal hill event held this World Cup season, in Ljubno ob Savinji, by finishing ahead of Norway and Austria. It was Slovenia's first World Cup win in this event, after three runners-up finishes.
- Coming into this tournament, a female ski jumper representing Slovenia has yet to claim a medal at the world championships.
- Slovenia has claimed two world championship medals in team events: bronze in the men's normal hill in 2005 and bronze in the men's large hill in 2011.

Other contenders

- Austria has claimed a record five World Cup podiums in this event. It shares the record for most World Cup wins in this event with Japan and Germany (all 2).
- Chiara Hözl was part of all of Austria's five teams finishing on a World Cup podium in this event.
- Hözl was also in Austria's team that won the silver medal in this event at the world championships in 2019, alongside Eva Pinkelnig, Jacqueline Seifriedsberger and Daniela Iraschko-Stolz.
- Japan's only world title in a team event came in the mixed team normal hill event in 2013. Sara Takanashi and Yuki Ito were part of that team.
- Maren Lundby (G0-S1-B2) and Anna Odine Strøm (G0-S0-B2) are the Norwegian women to have collected multiple world championship medals in team events (women's/mixed). In 2019, both women were part of Norway's teams to grab a medal in the women's team normal hill and mixed team normal hill (both bronze).
- At the 2021 junior world championships in Lahti, Austria won the women's team normal hill event ahead of Russia in second and Slovenia in third place.

- Only female ski jumpers representing Germany, Austria, Norway and Japan have collected world championship medals in team events (women's/mixed).
