

PREVIEW WOMEN'S SUPER-G GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN – 30 Jan 2022

Italy

- Italian women make up the top three in the 2021/22 World Cup super-G standings: Federica Brignone (377), Elena Curtoni (348) and Sofia Goggia (332). No country ever swept the women's overall super-G podium.
- Italy has yet to win the crystal globe in the women's super-G. Brignone already won the overall (1), giant slalom (1) and Alpine combined (2) classifications, while Goggia claimed two downhill globes.
- Brignone (2), Goggia (2) and Curtoni (1) won five of the six super-G events held this World Cup season. The only non-Italian woman to claim a World Cup super-G event this season is Lara Gut-Behrami, who won in St. Moritz on 11 December.
- Only Austria (4 in 1998/99) has ever had more different super-G winners in a women's World Cup season than Italy (3) this season.
- Italy (5) is one shy of the record number of women's super-G wins by a country in a single World Cup season: six by Austria in 2004/05.
- Curtoni can become the first Italian woman to win back-to-back super-G events in the World Cup.
- Brignone can become the first Italian women to claim more than two super-G wins in a World Cup season. Karen Putzer (2 in 2002/03) and Goggia (2 in 2021/22) also achieved two super-G wins in a World Cup season.

Other contenders

- Swiss women won five of the last six World Cup super-G events held in Garmisch-Partenkirchen: Lara Gut-Behrami (4) and Corinne Suter (1). Gut-Behrami will not participate this weekend.
- Switzerland's five super-G victories in Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the women's World Cup are already most for the country at a single resort. Only Austria (8 in Cortina d'Ampezzo, 7 in Lake Louise) and United States (8 in Cortina d'Ampezzo) have achieved more women's World Cup super-G wins at a specific venue.
- Suter can become the third woman to claim multiple World Cup super-G wins in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, after Gut-Behrami (4) and Lindsey Vonn (3).
- Tamara Tippler finished on eight World Cup super-G podiums (including one in Garmisch-Partenkirchen), but never won. This is currently the women's record for most podium finishes without ever winning in this discipline. Tippler finished second in Cortina d'Ampezzo last week.
- Austria's last super-G win in the women's World Cup was achieved by Nina Ortlieb in La Thuile on 29 February 2020. The two Austrian women to win the Garmisch-Partenkirchen super-G in the World Cup are Anna Veith (2013) and Nicole Schmidhofer (2019).

- The only German woman to record a World Cup super-G win in Garmisch-Partenkirchen was Katja Seizinger on 13 January 1996. The most recent German woman to reach the podium in the Garmisch-Partenkirchen super-G was Viktoria Rebensburg (2nd in 2016).
- Germany's last super-G win in the women's World Cup was achieved by Rebensburg, in Lake Louise on 8 December 2019.
